GRANADA

Granada has played an important role in the most spectacular chapters of Spanish history. Arabic dominance in the city dramatically influenced its culture and created one of the world's most beautiful and unique monuments: the Alhambra and Generalife. The Renaissance left its mark with the Cathedral, the Capilla Real (where the Catholic King and Queen are entombed), La Cartuja, the Monasterio de San Jerónimo and numerous churches and palaces.

The Arabic period dominates in the narrow and cobbled streets. With its 270.000 inhabitants, Granada is the capital of the eponymous province and is home of one of the biggest universities in Spain.

More than 60.000 university students give life and a young atmosphere to the streets, cafes, terraces, pubs and bars with their big variety of tapas.

The Albayzin, Granada's eldest quarter, stretches over the hill opposite the Alhambra.

Narrow, cobbled streets rise and fall leading to small squares, caves or beautiful vantage points overlooking the Alhambra, white houses with patios or gardens, fountains and Arabic houses with clear Mediterranean influences.

Escuela Delengua is very close to the Cathedral, next to Plaza Nueva, at the foot of the Albayzin quarter.
